Dear Sir,

Here is the write up on the session:

Introduction to Nitishastra

In today's world of education Economics and Political science are considered to be two different subject areas and hence have different departments and even teachers teaching them. However, ask any practitioner of the two areas and they will definitely agree that both not only overlap in their theory but are integral parts of each other in practical fields.

Ancient Indian Gurus and scholars always used to teach the subjects together in an holistic manner. One such branch of learning was Nitishashtra.

Nitishastra encompassed a whole gambit of subjects and topics like - Governance, Management, Leadership, Economics, Ethics, Policy, Politics, etc.

This seminar was aimed at introducing the topic of Nitishastra to the students of the Economics and Political Science department so that they are able to see the confluence of the two subjects and understand their practical applications. The session was conducted in an interactive manner, with the speaker acting more as a facilitator and encouraging the students to think and share their thoughts and views. A story of Milk and Kheer was narrated by the speaker, which acted as the base for all further learning and discussion. The participation shown by the students was overwhelming and was a feedback that the topic was not just well received, but also very well understood by them.

Thank You,
Bharat Dash.
