Gender and Development : The Changing Approaches

Navaneeta Rath
Professor in Sociology,
Utkal University, Vani Vihar

Why Gender Development became a concern?

- Patriarchy
- Gender bias
- Gender stereotypes
- Gender Asymmetry
- Gender slavery
- Development benefits became male centric
- Accommodating both the gender groups in the process of development as an International commitment.
- Thinking on gender started from post second world war period followed by the period of decolonization.

The Paradigms in Gender Development discourse

- Started in 1950s and took real momentum in 1970s.
- The two major paradigms in "Gender and development" discourse are the welfarist and the developmentalist approach.
- The welfarist approach comprises of WAD and WID. WID gives a coverage to Equity Approach, Anti-poverty Approach and Efficiency Approach
- The Developmentalist approach includes Gender & Development (GAD) and Empowerment

The Welfare Approach

- The welfare approach addresses women solely in their reproductive role as mothers and wives, and ignores women's productive and community managing roles entirely.
- The welfare approach remains restricted to social welfare concerns such as nutritional training, food aid, education mother child health programmes, family planning programs and home economics".
- The welfare approach was most popular between 1950 and 1970.
- The welfarist approach comprises of WID and WAD. WID gives a coverage to Equity Approach, Anti-poverty Approach and Efficiency Approach.

WID

WID approach dates back to the early years of 1970s

- The prevailing belief among the development theorists and the gender theorists: women had not only been left out of development but had also become even more disadvantaged as a result of the ongoing development programmes and projects.
- This approach has its origins the influential work Woman's Role in Economic Development by the Danish economist Ester Boserup (1970).
- Boserup argued the process of modernization was anti-women. It was gradually sidelining the women from the process of development and was limiting their outdoor economic participation in a visible manner.
- So, they demanded a better integration of women into the economic system. The term WID became popular particularly throughout the United Nations Decade for Women (1976-1985) which was initiated following the First World Conference on Women held in Mexico city in 1975.
- The World Bank became the pioneering international organization to recognize the need for Women in Development, appointing a WID Adviser in 1977.
- The first major success of the WID movement was the 1973 Percy Amendment to the US Foreign Assistance Act which spelt out that the assistance granted by the US Agency for International Development (USAID) should "provide special attention to those programmes projects and activities which integrate women into the national economies of foreign countries, thus improving their status and assisting the total development effort".

Criticism:

- The WID approach concentrated very narrowly on the inequalities between men and women and ignored the social, cultural, legal and economic factors that give rise to those inequalities in society. So, critics commented that the attempt of WID approach to bring women issues into the development agenda without addressing their roots is a fallacious attempt.

<h3 style="text-align: center;">The Equity Approach</h3> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The equity approach is based on the assumption that economic growth has always been detrimental to the status of women.</li> <li>So, it makes an advocacy for the equal distribution of development benefits between men and women.</li> <li>It advocates for equal opportunity for women</li> </ul>	 <h3 style="text-align: center;">The Anti poverty Approach</h3> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>The Anti-poverty approach targeted at reducing the existing inequalities between men and women by reducing the income inequalities.</li> </ul>	<h3 style="text-align: center;">The Efficiency Approach</h3> <ul style="list-style-type: none"> <li>Became popular in the 1980s.</li> <li>The efficiency approach regards women's productive capacities are kept as the unutilized and underutilized asset for development.</li> <li>To them development becomes more delivering when women's contributions to the process is taken into account. Women should be treated as the "Effective, Visible and Vital" contributors.</li> </ul>

WAD

The Women and Development approach arose in opposition to WID in the latter part of the 1970s.

- It departs from the WID approach in arguing that women had always been an integral part of the development process by contributing significantly to the care and production economy.
- They criticise patriarchy, modes of production and marginalisation of women.
- Major approaches are capacity building, women exclusive programme designing and credit supply.
- Transformational Approach for creation of leadership.
- Development by women and for women.

Criticism:

The WAD approach tends to see women as a class and gives little attention to the differences among women. The vital point of intersectionality i.e. with the concerns of class, ethnicity, etc have been downplayed by these theorists.

The Developmentalist Approach:

- The developmentalist approach developed in the mid 1980s as a replacement for the welfarist approach.
- The developmentalist approach demanded as members of the society, women have every right to design development, direct development and to reap the benefits of development equally with the men.
- The Developmentalist approach insists upon "Gender and Development" programmes and the empowerment strategies.

Gender And Development

- The main focus of GAD is gender mainstreaming and it proposes top-down state intervention can play a major role in women's emancipation.
- The GAD framework owes its origin to the works of Caroline Moser who developed the Moser Gender Planning Framework while working at the Development Planning Unit of the University of London.
- The major focus of the Moser framework includes gender role identification, gender needs assessment, disaggregating control of resources and decision making within the households, planning for balancing the triple roles of reproduction, production and community management.
- The GAD approach to development looks at the unequal relations women face in the society and the prevalent inequitable distribution of esteem, power and economic resources. The ultimate goal of the GAD approach is to create equitable and sustainable development for both men and women and to make them equal participating members in the decision-making process.
- The GAD approach sets out to ensure legal changes to laws that discriminate against women's rights. Inheritance and property rights.
- Criticism:
  - The GAD approach is criticized for over emphasizing the social differences between men and women without providing equal weight age on the bonds between them and the potentials they have for change.

Empowerment Approach

- Empowerment approach is considered to be the most critical and the most promising among all the approaches.
- Instead of top-down state policies, it relies on bottom-up movements of the grass-root people.
- The main thrusts of empowerment approach are awareness generation, political mobilization and to acquire "created space" not "invited space".
- Particularly, DAWN (Development Alternatives with Women for a New Era), which is a "network of activists, researchers and policymakers" from the Third World has an important contribution for the genesis and growth of this approach.
- The concept of empowerment be broken down and analyzed in terms of assets (avoir – knowledge (savoir) – capacity (pouvoir) – will (vouloir).

Caroline Moser makes the conceptual distinction between practical gender needs and strategic gender needs.

PGN

- Practical Gender Needs (PGN) tends to be immediate and short term.
- It is unique to particular women.
- It is related to daily needs, food, housing, income, health, children etc.
- It can be easily identifiable by women.
- It can be addressed by provision of specific inputs such as food, hand pumps, clinics etc.
- It can be addressed by involving women as beneficiaries and perhaps as participants.
- It can improve condition of woman's lives.
- It generally does not alter traditional roles and relationships.

SGN

- Strategic Gender Needs (SGN) tends to be long term.
- It is common to almost all women.
- It is related to disadvantaged position, subordination, lack of resources and education, vulnerability to poverty and violence etc.
- Strategic gender needs aim at reducing the disadvantages of the women by empowering and emancipating them but, they are not easily identifiable by them and require policy intervention.
- It can be addressed by consciousness raising, increasing self confidence, education, strengthening women's organisations, political mobilisation etc.

GEM

- GEM "refers to the opportunities through which women are actually able to achieve equality with men".
- The parameters of GEM are:
  - the share of parliament seats occupied by women.
  - the proportion of legislators, senior officials and managers who are women.
  - the female share of professional and technical jobs.
  - the ratio of estimated female to male income.

GDI

The measures of GDI are:

- 'longevity' (female and male life expectancy at birth)
- 'knowledge' (female and male literacy rates, and female and male combined primary, secondary and tertiary enrolment ratios)
- 'decent standard of living' (estimated female and male earned income)

Gender Inequality Index (GII) is a new index for measurement of gender disparity that was introduced in the 2010 Human Development Report
Gender Gap Report

FACT-SHEET ON WORLD'S WOMEN

- Every 90 seconds, one woman dies during pregnancy or child birth. Women make up 80% of all refugees and displaced people.
- Women are largely excluded from formal peace processes. Only 1 in 13 participants of peace negotiations since 1992 were women.
- Women make up more than 50% of the global population, but fill less than 20% of all parliamentary seats.
- More than 16.4 million women in the world have HIV/AIDS.
- Women account for 70% of the population living in absolute poverty (on less than $1.00 a day).
- Tens of millions of girls have been aborted, killed, undernourished, or terribly neglected due to their gender.
- 311 million working age women continue to live and work in countries without legal protection.

- Every year, 60 million girls are sexually assaulted at, or on their way to school.
- Women and girls are 80% (540,000) of the estimated 800,000 people trafficked across national borders annually with the majority (505,600) trafficked for sexual exploitation.
- At least 60 million girls are 'missing' from various populations - mostly in Asia - as a result of infanticide, neglect or sex-selected abortions.
- Between 100 and 140 million women and girls alive today have been subjected to Female Genital Mutilation.
- Today, the world houses about 900 million illiterates and 2/3 rd among them are the women.
- It is estimated that there are about 1.2 billion people living below poverty world wide and 70% of them are the women.

### Masculinity: Characteristics; Janet Saltzman Chafetz

(1974, 35-36) describes seven areas of masculinity.

Physical	Virile, athletic, strong, brave. Unconcerned about appearance and aging;
Functional	Breadwinner, provider for family as much as mate.
Sexual	Sexually aggressive, experienced. Single status acceptable.
Emotional	Unemotional, stoic, the proverb says boys don't cry;
Intellectual	logical, intellectual, rational, objective, practical,
Interpersonal	leader, dominating; disciplinarian; independent, free, individualistic; demanding;
Other Personal Characteristics	Success-oriented, ambitious, aggressive, proud, egotistical; moral, trustworthy; decisive, competitive, uninhibited, adventurous.

### Patriarchy:

Definition: Patriarchy is defined as "A society in which men hold most of all of the power" and "a form of social organization in which the father or eldest male is the head of the family" as per Oxford Dictionary.

Patriarchy is best defined as control by men. The opposite is matriarchy which means women are in charge and the head of families. Obviously, the culture of the United States and most other countries is patriarchal. Men have the power and control the women. If you don't believe that consider the basics of how our society functions.

The assumption about women is that women are not equal to men in many ways due to following gender ideologies and dualities:

Body	Mind
Nature	Culture
Passive	Aggressive
Domestic	Public
Emotion	Reason

All the above characteristics on the left are associated with women, while all the qualities on the right are associated with men. All characteristics associated with men show the presence of higher ability, aggression and higher evolution. Men also gain dividend from patriarchy in terms of honor, prestige and the right to command. Since the evolution, man has been able to make himself strong having power of control in his hand. This is true in the following picture by making comparison of evolution of woman and man. Thus, we realize that the society that does not discriminate women is better. Women need justice to raise their status. Society must be gender friendly and gender sensitive to give women empowerment, participation and equality that could lead to human development in real sense.

### Gender Roles: On the bases of sexual division of labour, there are three basic categories of human activities. In gender, we call these as Gender Roles. These are

- 1) Reproductive Role
- 2) Productive Role
- 3) Community Management Role

1. Reproductive Role:

Reproductive Role includes child-bearing/rearing responsibilities and domestic tasks done by women. Reproductive activities are divided as below:

a. Human or biological reproduction:

It includes not only bearing children but also reproducing the relationship of marriage, kinship, fertility and sexuality.

b. The Reproduction of labor:

It means the care and socialization of children and the maintenance of adult individuals who will fit into the social structure of society.

c. Social Reproduction:

These activities include caring of children, adults and old through activities of feeding the children, cooking food for adult and old, washing, cleaning, nursing and many other household activities.

2. Productive Role:

Activities in which women and men engage themselves for the purpose of production of goods and services is called their Productive Role. Both women and men engage in these activities. These activities carry a reward in the form of wages in cash or kind, therefore, these activities are regarded as economic activities also. Work done in farms, factories, and offices fall in this category. However, men generally dominate in these activities due to having more time and better skills to get higher wages, while women are concentrated in labor intensive low paid jobs.

3. Community Management Role:

All activities related to the governance of community life, the organization of cultural and social activities are called the Community Management Role. The Community Management work is voluntary and unpaid work. Both women and men are engaged in these activities. However, men gain in this by earning social prestige and social leadership whereas women's community management role is valued as doing some work in their 'free time'.

### Feminism:

On the surface it is a redress of women's rights, deep in its core is the inevitability and vengeance of the fair sex, escorted by the fallout of technology. Feminism is based on the high evaluation of women as human beings and rejects the assignment of roles based on gender. Women's studies is the academic manifestation of feminism. It receives support from feminists and arms us with knowledge. Women's studies has grown in American college campuses since the late 1960s. It marshals new feminist scholarship from various disciplines and builds on it to create new concepts and theories. Much of this work is done as a collective effort.

Feminism is very much a modern notion within legal circles, which aims to eradicate any prejudice against women's rights. This in a society strongly founded upon a male-orientated legal system, which historically fails to recognize the social and legal rights of women, and instead focuses upon "male-orientated theories and ideologies. It is this patriarchy that feminists thrive to eliminate. Feminism is a philosophy in which women and their contributions are valued. It is based on social, political and economical equality for women. Feminists can be anyone in the population, men, women, girl or boys. Feminism can also be described as a movement. A revolution that includes women and men who wish the world to be equal without boundaries. These boundaries or blockades are better known as discrimination and biases against gender, sexual orientation, age, marital status and economic status. Everyone views the world with his or her own sense of gender and equality. Feminists view the world as being unequal. They wish to see the gender gap and the idea that men are superior to women decreased or even abolished.

Feminism is also described as an ideology focusing on equality of both sexes. Some have argued that gendered and sexed identities, such as "man" and "woman", are social constructs. Feminists often differ in opinion over the sources of inequality, how to attain equality, and the extent to which gender and gender-based identities should be questioned and critiqued."

A social movement of women whose aim is to abolish Patriarchy. The multifaceted nature of patriarchy is reflected in a variety of issues, campaigns and types of feminism. Feminist movements differ in how they view patriarchy and how they organize to combat it.

The history of feminism can never be written fully. Known feminist history began with the first wave of feminism inspired by the ideals of the French revolution and women's participation in it. In Britain the publication in 1792 of Mary Wollstonecraft's 'A Vindication of the Rights of Women' started the first wave. She was concerned with women's right to equal education and many 19th century feminists fought for this, opening up schools and colleges for women, gaining entry into men's colleges and male professions such as medicine.

Legal reforms which altered the legal status of married women from being their husband's property to becoming legal individuals who could be awarded legal custody rights' own property and sue for divorce, all partly due to feminist pressures.

Feminists were also concerned with sexuality. They campaign successfully to abolish the Contagious Diseases Acts which permitted policemen to forcibly examine and lock up women suspected for being a 'common prostitute'. They petitioned successfully to raise the age of consent to protect young girls from the white slave trade. Some fought for women's right to enjoy sex and control their fertility. All these continued during the inter-war period but largely within the existing political parties, especially the labour and communist parties. It became less a mass movement and more of a parliamentary reform movement.

The Second Wave of Feminism is associated with Betty Friedan's "Feminine Mystique"(1963) in which allegedly happy, upper middle class full time housewives and mothers speak about their misery and frustration. This was the 'problem with no name', the unconceptualized dissatisfaction of women with their lives in spite of having faithfully following patriarchal prescriptions for female happiness. Feminism in Britain and the U.S.A. also grew out of the revolt of women in the New Left against their treatment by male comrades. In U.K. there were also equal pay strikes –revolts by employed women.

The Women's liberation movement is one of the main forces within the second wave. It is not a hierarchical, structured-membership organization but loosely structured encompassing many groups, political theories and campaigns. There are two important strands within the Women's Liberation Movements:

- Socialist or Marxist Feminism
- Radical and Revolutionary Feminism

Marxist Feminism is primarily concerned with the interrelationship between capitalism and patriarchy. The intellectual roots lie in Engel's theory that patriarchy originated with the development of private property; its political roots lie in the socialist movement.

The orthodox Marxist view that women's oppression is a function of capitalism. Engels argued that women's emancipation depended on women 'going out to work'; becoming proletarians and struggling for socialism, which would also free women. Lenin argued that house work is demeaning drudgery and that socialized services( staffed by women) should supplant it.

Radical and Revolutionary Feminists are concerned with sex-class theories. They criticize Marxist Feminists for subordinating patriarchy to capitalism. A small number of radical feminists situate women's oppression in biological inequality but most view it as socially structured, pre-existing capitalism and possibly even the source of all other systems of domination like class and race, identifying power and control as its fundamental elements. Women are viewed-

- In the economic sense, in the domestic labour debate
- In the political sense, as a sex-class controlled by actual or threatened violence.

Theories of male violence led to the growth of revolutionary feminism, which is primarily concerned with compulsory heterogeneity as the mechanism for controlling women's reproductive power. This control operates through ideological means such as romantic ideology and through violence, as in wife-battering, rape, pornography and so on.

The second wave of feminism has also given rise to Women's Studies, which originated in the political practice of conscious-raising –learning about women's oppression from discussions of personal experiences. Feminists started questioning the reasons behind the absence of women in various studies.

All knowledge is socially constructed, in that it is selected and ordered. As a social construct it reflects patriarchal concerns in these processes. All knowledge handed down in educational institutions is patriarchal in form (hierarchy and competition) and content (Disciplines and their boundaries). On these view women's studies is a new discipline which embraces the feminist principle of women's oppression and attempts to analyze how patriarchy is structured.

### Types of Feminism:

The basic premise of feminism is that women at present have lower status than men. Women are discriminated against socially, economically and politically and that this state of affairs is unjustified and this must be changed.

Concept Note

Women have always been accorded a secondary position in almost all the spheres of life, starting from the beginning of human civilization. In spite of having immense contribution to society, they are always looked down upon and subjugated by the so-called patriarchal society. Apart from various social factors, responsible for the subordination of women, literature being in complicity with patriarchy at times has also been impervious to the issues of women. However, both literature and society are proportional in dealing with the issues of females.
